Background and Context

Based on the previous experience, as well as the official reports of state and international institutions, applicants to this proposal have concluded that many young people, especially most at-risk youth, are highly marginalized and socially excluded in the WB countries. It is known that the access to quality education is one of the most important factors in obtaining higher living standard and maintaining quality level of future social interaction. Failure to access quality education may be detrimental to the overall social development of young person. That not only it significantly affects the prospects for future employment, but also it negatively affects mental health and social integration. Governments of the WB countries have recognized the need for more inclusive education and have been working on integrating specific target groups; however, the results of the reforms remain limited. Youth at risk are not a homogenous group, but a very diverse one, with each one having specific needs concerning their education. That is why this project aims to provide answer how to improve access to the quality education, as well as to connect regional stakeholders in sharing their experiences in designing and implementing educational reforms concerning the youth at risk.

In this project phase, Nisma ARSIS requires an expert for the development of the policy brief on the access to education of the youth at risk in the Western Balkan countries
